“Could It Be Possible For An Ordinary Man To Buck The Trends, Reclaim His Masculinity And Use Sex As A Weapon In Ways Only THOUGHT To Be Reserved For A Women?”

“The Answer Is YES... because in the world of the blind... the one eyed man is KING”

Dear Friend,

I'm about to reveal the social and psychological secrets that 93.5% of men will NEVER know about the importance of the way your body looks.

It would be a mistake to think that this may sound like jargon or hype... yet, I assure you it's not.

In fact, I'm about to prove beyond a shadow of a doubt that looks play a much larger part in how your life is dictated than you've ever thought...

... and it all starts with the first moment someone lays eyes on you.

A question:

Have you ever stepped foot into a room and had the whole room turn in your direction as if you had banged a gong while you walked through the door?

Or... have you ever had women look at you like you were “sweating” sex... like you’d just walked out of a TUB of sexual charisma?

It’s Time To Discover A World Where Men
Use Their Bodies AND Their Minds...
To Get Exactly What They Want From Life.

You see, the tides are turning and MASCULINE men are becoming more and more rare.

In fact, you can turn on the TV and witness it every night.

Out of shape, wussy men that get “owned” by their wives make up most of the basis behind many of our favorite TV shows and movies.

Our friends continually tell us how they hate that their wives nag them to death... while those same wives wonder in amazement where the REAL MEN HAVE GONE.

Don’t laugh.

You know I’m right.

So, before we really get started, this is what’s in it for you; here’s why you should take your valuable time to read all 32 pages of this scathing report:

Both Men AND Women Make INSTANT Assumptions
About You Based On The Way You Look (known as Value Attribution)... AND It’s Almost IMPOSSIBLE To Change
Those Assumptions Once They Are Ingrained
(Diagnosis Bias)...

... So You Might As Well Intercept These Assumptions...

... And Control Them As Weapons Of Mass Influence!

I’ll show you how to do that... and blow through all 4 pillars of attraction in the process.

And not only that, but you’re getting ready to understand what “looks” REALLY means and what parts really matter... and how men can RECLAIM their masculinity and exude the sexual chemistry and charisma that women desire... and other men respect and admire.

Curious yet?

Good.

But then again, you may not know me from a sack of potatoes, so why should you even WANT to take my word for this?

Well, first off, I'm Brad Howard, and I've spent the last several years of my life consulting in the health and fitness industry... and most recently "moonlighting" in the dating industry as a controversial blogger and "guest" dating coach.

Now, the reason I'm telling you this isn't to brag by any means. In fact, I'm no better or no worse than you.

BUT, this combined information that I've been privy to DOES give me a unique advantage into being able to see between the lines on some pretty interesting stuff when it comes to your body and how it works in the whole "scheme" of subconscious physical attraction and influence

Here's the deal, after working in the health and fitness industry and watching people working out day in and day out... I noticed a HUGE TREND in that most people were exercising and working out for VANITY...

... but more specifically, it really seemed that the majority of people wanted more sexual attention.

Sure, we all SAY that we are doing it for our health, but the truth is that we all just want to be more attractive... point blank.

But I really got a rude awakening as I started "moonlighting" and I began to see lots of conflicting advice about men and our bodies, as most of the current dogma in BOTH the fitness AND dating niches had lots of ass backward views on how the male body should look...

... and in the dating case... that how we looked didn't even matter at all... which is total crap... and the social and psychological research PROVES it.

You see, throughout this manuscript, you'll hear me mention the "Adonis Index"... which is a research proven metric for men that when optimized... ends up slamming your body into the mold deemed most visually pleasing to women.

(Still not joking)

Studies have shown that a male body that has this particular shape garners more attraction from women and more admiration and FEAR from other men.

This is rigorous science. Not "backyard" philosophy.

Now before we get started... and I teach you this "perfect body formula" for men and how you can use it to influence events in your life... I want you to keep something in mind.

Never once am I going to bash you for being in whatever shape that you're in... or choose to be in.

In fact, all I am going to do is present some logical arguments... about how society works... how it applies to you and your body... and you can make a decision on whether you agree or not.

Some of these arguments are a little creative and take the “it’s not your fault” mantra... and completely turn it on its head.

Like this little ditty.

Billions upon billions of dollars are being spent every year on products and services that guarantee to make you look better... with the underlying current of these ads inferring that you “score” more in the process.

Of course, one could make 2 arguments here:

One, that the ad agencies are CREATING a reality of “physical attractiveness” equals good... or two... that we as humans have ALWAYS appreciated physical attractiveness and the products and services that are out are only augmenting such appreciations.

Who knows which one is really true?

(research points heavily to the 2nd one though)

Yet, other than the fact that many of these said products and services REALLY capitalize on the insecurities of others... you could say that all of this ad spend either directly... but at the very LEAST subtly... influences the way that people (and society as a whole)... view the world.

So, what we’re saying is that marketing is either driving the obsession with good looking bodies... or that the obsession has ALWAYS been there... and marketing is just taking advantage of it.

Either way... the obsession is there.

Now, the reason I’m saying this right now is because it’s common for people to “blame” things on big business... i.e.... the only reason looks are important is because Madison Avenue says that they should be.

Don’t play the “blame” game!

Here’s what I say... who’s to say that we can’t TAKE ADVANTAGE of the situation?

What if I were to tell you that a VERY small portion of the population is actually in shape (due to excuses mainly)... and that most people will NEVER be in shape... wouldn’t it make sense to say that with all of this “social conditioning” by big media... that actually BEING in shape could make you a guy that’s ADMIRERD by others?

I want you to think about that for a minute, because it represents the exact opposite of what most people think.

Look, there are profound opportunities in the world today, but you have to move in the opposite direction of the majority to see them.

As a great example, the band Metallica had a bunch of bad PR because one of their albums was mastered at a volume that was too loud. So now, the music execs are freaking out because they feel like they are getting bad press.

But what if these music execs looked at the situation in another direction?

What if they turned this media storm on its head and said...

“Of course it’s mastered loud. This is Metallica, the greatest rock band that ever lived... WHY WOULDN’T WE master it louder than a normal record...”

Seriously, do you KNOW anyone that listens to Metallica at a low level?

Exactly.

So here’s the quick moral and why you should open your mind a bit to what I’m about to say.

Don’t COMPLAIN about how the world works... figure out the rules... and SLINGSHOT your way to the top.

It’s like people that bitch and complain about rich people...

Look, everyone lives by the same rules... and since over 91% of rich people are self made... the difference is that one group of people decided to do something about it... and one sat back and complained.

So, on that point, even if in an ideal scenario, looks and the way your body is shaped don’t matter...

... why fight the flow.

Why try to swim upstream and battle the BILLIONS upon BILLIONS of dollars that are thrown into the market every day... consistently reinforcing the fact that good looking is GOOD...

... when you can USE that influence... all of those BILLIONS of dollars to YOUR advantage... and BECOME good looking yourself through the manipulation of this perfect body formula that we’re about to discuss.

Exactly!

(Is this clicking for you yet?)

It’s called “leverage”.

And it’s one piece of a much larger puzzle on influence... but more on that later.

Let’s get to the “perfect body formula”... as we had printed in Men’s Health, Runner’s World, and MSN Health and Fitness...

SH / WST: Could This Be The Formula For The Perfect Body?

The Perfect Body Formula - by John Barban, co-creator of The Adonis Golden Ratio

– As We Had Featured In Men's Health, Runner's World, and MSN Health and Fitness

A little math and a lot of effort can give you the classic proportion that makes women swoon

To build the perfect body, it helps to have the right dimensions. Thankfully, the magic formula for those dimensions has been known for centuries.

It's called the golden ratio — a dividend of two measurements that's roughly equal to 1.618-.

Its influence can be seen in the shape of a seashell, the spirals of a pinecone, and the Parthenon in Athens... and in blueprints for the archetypal human form: Leonardo da Vinci's Vitruvian Man and Michelangelo's David.

In fact, whether you're looking at art or nature, you'll find this ideal proportion turning up everywhere.

So it's no surprise to learn that chicks dig a physique that measures up to the golden ratio.

An Archives of Sexual Behavior study reveals that women are most attracted to muscular men whose shoulders measure 1.6 times the size of their waists. Of course, it's not always easy or practical to measure the width of your own shoulders — you need someone to do it for you. But you can use your chest circumference as a handy stand-in stat. "They're just different measures of the same thing," says Viren Swami, Ph.D., author of The Missing Arms of Venus de Milo: Reflections on the Science of Attractiveness.

One of Swami's studies shows that women prefer a chest-to-waist ratio of 1.4 instead of one in which the two measures are closer to each other. (It's a smaller ratio than 1.6 since your chest is narrower than your shoulders.) The bottom line: When women look at men's torsos, the V shape is victorious.

You can figure out your own proportion in three easy steps. All you need is a tape measure and a calculator.

1. Measure your shoulder circumference at its widest point — usually around your shoulders and chest in a line halfway between your nipple and collarbone. (If you're on your own, you can measure your chest at its widest point, just below your armpits.)

2. Determine your waist circumference by wrapping a measuring tape around your abdomen so that the bottom of the tape touches the top of your hip bones.

3. Divide the circumference of your shoulders (or chest) by that of your waist.

You don't have to look like a cartoon superhero to hit the ideal proportion: If you use the standard from Swami's studies, you could hit the jackpot by having a 45-inch chest and a 32-inch waist.

To visualize the look, think Muscle Beach 1940, not Wrestle Mania 2008. (For the sake of comparison, the most popular muscleman from the presteroid era, Steve Reeves, had a 52-inch chest and a 29-inch waist — way-beyond-golden ratio of 1.8.) Leanness rules over hugeness.

What's more, lower-body dimensions don't have the same appeal as those of the top half. "This point is pretty conclusive," Swami says. "When women judge a man's physical attractiveness, lower-body shape plays a negligible role."

(Which isn't to say that you should ignore your southern hemisphere, because it's exceedingly difficult to develop a lean, muscular upper body without using your body's biggest and strongest muscles: your hips and thighs).

Their immense power to drive metabolism and generate muscle-building hormones will help grow your chest, shoulders, arms, and upper back, too. The trick is to use your meatiest muscles strategically to produce the eye candy women find so tasty. That, of course, is the goal of the three-exercise workout below.

But before you launch into the workout, know that you don't have to achieve picture-perfect results to get the girl. "There's some research to suggest that women aren't too keen on the most attractive men — they consider them too far out of their league," says Swami. The golden ratio is nice to shoot for, in other words, but you won't be disappointed with a silver or bronze.

Build a V-Shaped Torso

These three exercises can make your upper body wider and appear more athletic from any angle. Do three workouts a week — heavy, light, and medium — with at least a day off in between. Complete 5 sets of 5 reps of each exercise on the heavy day (rest 2 minutes between sets), 3 sets of 13 on the light day (rest 60 seconds in between), and 4 sets of 8 on the medium day (with 90 seconds of rest).

1. Wide-Grip Deadlift

What it does: Works your trapezius muscles, the pair of triangular-shaped upper-back muscles controlling your shoulder blades. The bigger and stronger you make your traps, the wider and thicker your upper back will be.

How to do it: Stand in front of a loaded barbell with your feet shoulder-width apart and the bar close to your shins. Squat and grab the bar with an overhand grip that's about twice your shoulder width. Your lower back should be flat and your arms straight. Now stand as you pull the bar up the front of your legs. Finish the lift by pulling your shoulder blades together in back.

Golden opportunity: If you extend the range of motion, you make the exercise harder, giving you the dual benefit of building bigger muscles and increasing fat-burning potential. You can do this simply by using 25-pound plates instead of 45s.

2. Incline Dumbbell Chest Press

What it does: Works your upper chest and the front part of your deltoid muscles, adding width to your upper body when viewed from the front. As a bonus, it also hits your triceps.

How to do it: Set an adjustable bench to a 45-degree incline. Grab a pair of dumbbells and lie on your back on the bench, holding the dumbbells just above your shoulders with your palms facing out. Then push the dumbbells straight up from your shoulders.

Golden opportunity: For more emphasis on your upper chest and triceps, you can substitute the incline narrow-grip barbell bench press. Set the bench to a lower incline (15 to 30 degrees), and hold the barbell with a shoulder-width grip. (A typical bench-press grip is about one and a half times the shoulder width.)

3. Chin-up

What it does: Works your lats through a full range of motion while also hitting your biceps. Well-developed lats are, by design, V-shaped — wide in the middle of your back and tapering down to blend into the connective tissue of your lower back.

How to do it: Grab the chin-up bar with an underhand, shoulder-width grip. Hang straight down from the bar with your knees slightly bent and your lower legs crossed behind you. Pull yourself up until your chest touches the bar.

Golden opportunity: There's really no exercise that improves on the chin-up. However, if you can't do many, substitute the underhand-grip lat pulldown. But try it while kneeling on the floor instead of sitting on the bench. If you pull the bar to your chest from a kneeling position, you'll use more muscles to stabilize and balance your body.

Hey, so now that you know what the perfect body formula is, go punch in your numbers in our AI tool and see where you compare:

<http://www.adonisgoldenratio.com>

But what does this mean... and why is it important for you... as a man, to focus on strengthening your Adonis Index... as it relates to women and society.

How can we use our physique as a “weapon?”

The answer... lies in the “Halo Effect”...

A Con Man's Dream -- How To "Manipulate" A Woman's Perceptions Using The "Halo Effect"

From Wikipedia:

“The halo effect refers to a cognitive bias whereby the perception of a particular trait is influenced by the perception of the former traits in a sequence of interpretations.

(In other words, if someone views one trait about you to be good... then they assume that other traits about you are equally good...)

Edward L. Thorndike was the first to support the halo effect with empirical research.

In a psychology study published in 1920, Thorndike asked commanding officers to rate their soldiers; Thorndike found high cross-correlation between all positive and all negative traits.

(IMPORTANT POINT BELOW)

People seem not to think of other individuals in mixed terms; instead we seem to see each person as roughly good or roughly bad across all categories of measurement.

A study by Solomon Asch suggests that attractiveness is a central trait, so we presume all the other traits of an attractive person are just as attractive and sought after.

The halo effect is involved in Harold Kelley's implicit personality theory, where the first traits we recognize in other people then influence the interpretation and perception of latter ones (because of our expectations).

Attractive people are often judged as having a more desirable personality and more skills than someone of average appearance.

Thus, we see that celebrities are used to endorse products that they have no actual expertise in evaluating, and with which they may not even have any prior affiliation, as is the case with most celebrity food-product endorsements.”

(end Wikipedia Reference)

To break it down even further, Halo Effect can be divided into 2 distinct phenomena:

- Value Attribution
- Diagnosis Bias

Value attribution is basically a quick mental shortcut that determines what’s worthy of our attention. It’s an inclination to imbue a person or thing with certain qualities based on an initial perceived value... no matter HOW irrelevant the factors are.

(Judging a book by its cover is an irrelevant factor, yet even though people know this, they STILL subconsciously do this ALL THE TIME)

Diagnosis bias takes value attribution a little farther. Once you’ve been labeled with a certain value... or diagnosis... studies show that people will IGNORE objective data about you (bad stuff), to keep in line with their previous assessment of you. (If you don’t understand the POWER that this represents... read on)

In other words, with these two factors, the Halo Effect represents the KING of first impressions... because people look at you and make snap judgments of you AS A WHOLE... based on key factors... your body being one of them.

So, if a person looks at you... and has a favorable first impression... then they have grouped you into the “good” category.

AND...

Those favorable first impressions are LASTING. It’s very hard to change them. This is why some people speak of favorable treatment... and why people that are known as screw ups get yelled at much more than those that rarely screw up.

It’s as if people don’t ever ACKNOWLEDGE the screw up from the favored person.

And, not only that, remember how we “put the blinders on”?

You don’t say, “Well Tom is great at this, sucks at this, etc”

You say, “Yeah, Tom’s a good dude”

Con men understand this. Think about any of the movies in the Ocean’s Eleven Trilogy for a second.

Do you think that any of these cons would have gone down had the guys (and girls) not LOOKED the part?

I'm sure you can now see the RAW power of the Halo Effect, and how it can be used for good or evil. It's just a tool, but a VERY seductive and manipulative tool it is.

But... Halo Effect doesn't only work in the positive manor... it can also work against you... with the "Reverse Halo Effect"... or "Devil Effect".

It's why people can say that they understand what you're like just by looking at the cleanliness of your car... or if you have shaggy hair... or wrinkly clothes...

(Think of a bum... what does he/she look like? What snap judgments do you make when you see one?)

Now, let's talk about why the "Halo Effect" is more important NOW... than ever before.
Important Takeaway:

One GOOD trait can influence the way people perceive you as a WHOLE... and this influence can and WILL stick with you for a VERY LONG time, as most people IGNORE other objective data about you once they've "diagnosed" you with a certain label.

Warning: You've Got 6 Seconds... Blow This And Kiss Your Chances With Her GOODBYE... FOREVER!

Every day... the world... and all of the people in it are constantly being bombarded by things that are aimed to get their attention.

Marketing messages fly around.

iPhones, iPads, Blackberry's and other tech devices ring and beep.

Cars talk.

I'm sure you asking yourself... why would I bring this up?

The answer is simple:

Society's Attention Deficit Disorder

With all of the buzz and attention sapping distractions that the average person deals with on a day to day basis, people are adapting... and by doing so... their brains are becoming more efficient in distinguishing bad attention from good attention...

... the noise from the nuggets.

In layman's terms you don't HAVE all day to make an impression... and people are relying on their labels even more, and at a FASTER RATE now that ever before.

You've got LESS time now than you did 10 years ago.

People's attention spans are shortening.

The command for time is increasing... minute by minute...

... and through all of this, you expect that people AREN'T going to rely on a few "short cuts" to size you up in a hurry.

Think about it.

Yes... it is possible to capture a woman's attention when you DON'T look your best... but with all of the noise of her life competing against you... why take that chance?

(Just like it's possible to waltz into a high end meeting and command respect without looking your best... it ain't likely... but it's possible)

Why not figure out a way to effectively capture her attention... while using the "Halo Effect" to set her opinion of you in a positive manner?

Here's why this is important to realize:

You see, women don't have a problem meeting men... not for the most part.

They get hit on daily, in general, by a countless number of men... substantially more than the average guy (that's you and me by the way) does.

Women can go out to bars and bring home men in the blink of an eye... if they wanted to.

But herein lays a woman's true problem.

I think we can all agree that women have no issues with men when it comes to quantity... and in fact, I'm sure you've heard of a female friend talking about the way men hit on her... in bars, in clubs, wherever.

No, my friend, the true issue for a woman revolves around the QUALITY of men that come and talk to her.

And boy is it a rare occurrence.

Women hate getting fired off on day in and day out by men that are unqualified... those that aren't real, quality men.

They want to get wrapped up in the moment... they want to be part of a fairy tale.

So, with that being said, wouldn't it make sense to assume that women are constantly looking for clues and quickly assigning values and labels... when they're out and about... to determine if a man is a QUALITY man or not?

I think it makes sense to say so.

Why You Blew It With Her... Before You Uttered A Single Word!

But what determines a QUALITY man in a woman's eyes.

Well, for starters, research suggests that women find 4 main PILLARS attractive in varying degrees... from MOST important... to LEAST important

- Social Status
- Social Dominance
- Physical Attractiveness
- Physical Dominance

In a nutshell, a woman (or frankly anyone you meet) forms a capsule of you... influenced by the "Halo Effect"... within moments of when she places her eyes on you based on what she sees...

- Based on how you look
- Based on how you groom
- Based on how you dress
- Based on how you interact socially
- Based on your body language
- Based on your body structure

However, depending on what a woman wants... different parts of this "formula" play different roles...

If she's interested in a short term fling... physical attractiveness and body structure play a heavier role...

Long term relationship... social status takes a huge step up

Now, before you go and say I'm crazy... keep in mind that I'm pulling this information straight from scientific research.

These aren't my guesses... or experiences.

These are peer reviewed results.

Also, now that the world of online dating has exploded... and Twitter and Facebook have become places to meet people, the "Halo Effect" and its value increases dramatically.

These people are judging you and assigning values to you based on what's in a profile... the pictures you have up... your body language...

... I think you get the picture.

Let's get to the point, and describe each of the 4 pillars... and why they are important.

Social Proof – The Anchor

Above all, this pillar is most important. It involves where you are in the social ladder, how cool you are, how much money you make, and how many people are friends with you.

It shows if you're trouble, fun, experienced.

In other words, social proof gives people a glimpse of who you are without them having to know you personally.

It also serves as a "reinforcement" when people are around you... because it reinforces the idea that you are a person that people want to be around.

Social Dominance – The Leader

This is the "alpha male" characteristic. Are you a leader? Do people follow you?

Do you march to your own beat? Do people try to pressure you to do things?

Whereas social proof states that you have lots of friends and that people want to be around you... social dominance implies that YOU are THE person that leads the group.

However, just because you have social dominance... doesn't mean you have strong social proof aka "the asshole".

Physical Attractiveness – The Weapon

Most people understand this. You are an attractive person or you aren't.

Physical attractiveness goes a little into God given abilities... like facial structure... but it is MORE affected by the things that people CAN control:

- Grooming
- Body Shape
- Clothes

In fact, most physical attractiveness research is inconclusive as far as face is concerned... especially when it comes to attracting women. However, new research suggests faces that look “confident” are more attractive than others, even when facial structure is taken into full account.

Physical Dominance -- The Intimidator

Are you an imposing figure? Can you kick ass if you need to?

This pillar doesn't mean as much as the others, mainly because women look for protection in other ways from men in general nowadays.

However, physical dominance plays a much bigger key in one night stands and short term flings.

So there you go... the 4 pillars of attraction.

Everything else doesn't matter or falls into one of these categories...

Now, let's talk about how a subset of the “Halo Effect” called the “Adonis Effect”, a weapon of mass influence, works...

It's Like Coming To A Sword Fight With A Sherman Tank!

I want you to imagine something very quickly. Picture two guys with similar skills, but one gentleman looks like a slob, the other, like a million bucks...

Who do you trust?

Who do you want to be around... or in this case... who would you NOT want people to see you with.

But that's not even the best news.

Here's where things get REALLY interesting.

Physical attractiveness... or rather... improving your physical attractiveness has more of an indirect effect on your life than a direct effect... in the grand scheme of things.

This is a central key of The Adonis Effect... which basically means that version of the "Halo Effect" that is influenced directly or indirectly through the manipulation of your body mass and shape.

Now, that's not to say that The Adonis Effect doesn't have a profound effect on how people judge you... or if they are attracted to you because of the way your body now looks... because studies show that it does.

BUT, the true power manifests when people can INTERNALIZE what they've accomplished and the magnification of OTHER, more powerful properties that come about due to both biofeedback, social feedback, and mental/emotional feedback.

Sure, people are going to notice the change in your body, but that's only PART of the powerful effect that we're talking about.

FACT: Improving your body, increases confidence levels.

FACT: More confident faces are judged more attractive, regardless of facial structure

FACT: An increase in confidence helps to increase your social status and your social dominance.

FACT: An increase in confidence helps to define and increase your self worth... which is what REALLY matters in any interaction.

Let's face it... if you don't feel like you belong in a situation, whether it's a business meeting, or talking to your new hotness of a neighbor... then you don't belong in the situation...

... and the other people can FEEL it.

This is when people tell you that you don't belong with the BIG DOGS.

(Which sucks)

Also, with an increase in physical attractiveness, your body language changes. Of course, we could wrap this in with an increase in "confidence", but I think that this needs to be brought up.

Remember, over 90% of your communication has absolutely nothing to do with the words that come out of your mouth. This communication comes from body language and tonality of voice... both of which can be positively affected by confidence.

Confidence ALSO affects sense of humor... which most women will tell you is a HUGE turn on. Think about it, people that tell jokes and playfully banter with others have to be confident enough in themselves to be willing to entertain themselves FIRST, while letting others in for the fun.

Too many people use humor as an approval seeking mechanism... but not the confident man.

The Clothes Analogy

Have you ever heard of the old wives tale about how "If you are sick, dress up; it'll make you feel better."?

Well, improving your body and physical attractiveness has this same effect.

Think about it, if you're overweight, you both consciously and unconsciously think about how fat you are every time you sit down and feel a fat roll doubling over.

I've been there, so I can tell you in all honesty that this is the case.

(And that's just if you're overweight. Underweight people have their own mental issues... like "I'm just not much of a MAN.")

What about when you're about to have sex? When the woman of your dreams is finally rubbing herself all over you... do you not wonder what she's thinking as she feels a fat roll? (or if you're thin, feels a rib)

Sure you do. It might not actually BE what she's thinking... but it DOES cross your mind.

This is why I believe that improving your body is the ONE THING that can have the most PROFOUND effect on your life...

(Other than having a great woman by your side)

... because it totally shatters many of your limiting beliefs, all in one fell swoop.

- Afraid of taking your shirt off at the beach - no issue
- Uncomfortable being naked in front of your woman - no issue
- Positive progress easily measured - no issue

Getting in the shape you want:

- Increases your confidence
- Increases your physical attractiveness
- Increases your stamina for sexual activity
- Increases the amount of time a woman marvels and feels your body in awe
- Increases the amount of "admiration" you get from others
- Increases the "interestingness" of who you are

... plus a whole gang load of other things that really make a difference in your life.

Can increasing your physical attractiveness increase your social proof and earning power... studies show that it can.

Can increasing your physical attractiveness increase your social dominance (i.e. your alpha maleness)... again... studies show that it can.

Can increasing your physical attractiveness increase your OWN SELF WORTH?

THAT, my friend... is the ultimate question.

And the answer...

... is a resounding YES!

Here's a funny thing about self worth that I think you should be aware of.

Did you know that personal trainers commonly express that the reason people fail when they try to improve their lives is ...

LOW SELF WORTH

People don't think they deserve things.

I'm gonna quote my friend Scot McKay here when I say:

"You have to DESERVE what you want"

This whole "get what you deserve mentality" is utterly useless.

It implies getting before giving... that you're "owed" something in life... that you need to figure out how to steal results.

But that's not how it works.

You have to deserve what you get, because if you don't... it won't stay. You can "trick" life, you can "trick" women into liking you... but the bottom line is... life has a way of weeding out the pretenders.

And it all happens in the realm of self worth.

Improving your self-worth is where true growth happens.

But there are some mindsets that we have to watch out for...

The 7 Most Crippling Mindsets Most Guys Have About Their Body... And What To Do About It...

Here are the top 7 reasons that we men never get in the shape that we covet... and end up sitting on the "sidelines" in the process.

MISTAKE #1: No clear, written goal in mind.

Most men go haphazardly about their lives with no specific goal, especially when it comes to exercise and improving their lives.

Yep, most men think that they are TOO GOOD to even think about it, knowing that if we just "work out"; everything will take care of itself.

... which is one reason most men never see ANY results.

MISTAKE #2: No clear metrics to measure your performance

Again, this goes back into mistake #1 a bit. SOME men might have a goal, but we don't know how to measure the results - or even have loose metrics that won't show us the "big picture" of what's going on with our bodies (for example)

Oh, and by the way, bodyweight is a loose metric at BEST as it really tells us NOTHING about how our bodies are composed.

Think about that.

Not only that, but without a clear goal and a clear way of measuring your progress, you become susceptible to "goal hijacking" – which is when you start down one path, but then due to a lack of results or clever marketing, you end up unknowingly "changing goals" without you even being aware of it.

As an example, let's use powerlifting. You may start out trying to look better, but then you read that you're "not a man" unless you can squat 500 lbs. Then, on your way to squatting 500 (which you'd need steroids for anyway), your body starts to look like a barrel.

Far from the initial goal of just looking better. And far worse, unless you're a competitive powerlifter, which is a different goal altogether.

MISTAKE #3: Believing that there will always be tomorrow

Procrastination kills more dreams than action EVER will. Think about how many times you've thought of a great idea, yet failed to act on it.

Remember... we never look at an action that we DIDN'T take and recall THAT as the turning point of our lives.

MISTAKE #4: Believing that she'll love us for who we are

Here's the kicker. Women hate stagnation and when they say things like:

"He's changed. He's not the same"...

...what they really mean is that you've stopped doing the things that turned her on in the first place.

One sure fire way of starting down the path of disaster with our women is to stop trying to improve our positions in life.

When we stop trying to change for the better... the ride's over and don't forget, women love to be on the ride, but they absolutely hate BEING the ride.

MISTAKE #5: Believing that we aren't meant for good things

Believe it or not... most men don't truly BELIEVE that we are destined for greatness. Maybe we've watched that one scene in Fight Club one too many times, but the simple fact is that men will simply let their lives PASS BY because we don't BELIEVE that we can have better.

So we do nothing - and commit the biggest sin ever in my point of view - we become stagnant.

MISTAKE #6: Believing that bigger is better

Did you know that most men OVERESTIMATE the amount of muscle mass that they need to unleash subconscious physical attraction by an astonishing 30%?

It's true. When it comes to crafting our perfect bodies, bigger is most assuredly not better... and the bodybuilding magazines simply don't help with this

What you don't know about the bodybuilding magazines is that every single person in that magazine is using steroids. Even most "fitness models" are on some type of "help".

So not only is that "role model" sporting a look that's unattainable for you being a natural trainer, going to that extreme actually MURDERS your attractiveness with women.

\(Check out the dastardly secrets in this video for more info on this\)

MISTAKE #7: Not Getting HELP

This is by FAR the biggest mistake of all.

Just as men loathe getting directions when we're lost, most men will never ask someone to help them get this part of our lives together.

Our egos prevent it... like asking for help reduces our manhood... or makes us look weak or helpless

This is the mistake that keeps most men from EVER having the kind of success that we truly want out of life.

Hey, I've been there myself.

But, let me tell you a little something about me that I think you'll be able to apply to your life.

About 4 years ago, I simply became frustrated with my lack in progress in life. After all, I have an aerospace engineering degree and was getting great marketing experience... I'm not bad looking and my body wasn't in god awful shape (just skinny).

Let's just say that frustrated is an understatement at this point... maybe you're feeling that way RIGHT NOW.

What I figured out was this, and I learned it because one smart man that I respect a bunch told me this when I asked him what he thought my problem was.

He said, "Brad... your problem is that you're a loner."

"WHAT!" (I didn't know what to think)

"Your problem is that you try to do ALL the research, ALL the work, ALL the figuring out of things from scratch... but guess what... all of this stuff has ALREADY been figured out.

Your ego is making you take the HARD ROAD and you don't even realize it. You think you're being honorable by "earning your stripes" but the simple fact is that instead of standing on the shoulders of those that have come before you or those that have already figured this stuff out... you're reducing yourself to mediocrity while everyone else passes you by."

Do you want to talk about a slap in the face... man... I felt it deep in my gut, and I knew that he was right.

It all made sense.

He went on to tell me that long ago, he quit worrying about what other people thought of him. If he didn't know something or wanted a desired result, he went and found the people that ALREADY knew how to get this desired result and one way or another... got the information... and therefore the result... that he was looking for.

And that, my friend, was the #1 key to his success.

Once I seriously grasped that... things started to RAPIDLY change in my life. My body improved, my finances improved, my love life improved.

Did I have challenges? You bet.

But I stopped trying to do everything myself. I learned to find the PEOPLE that could help me and leverage their results and expertise to get my results FAR FASTER than if I tried to do it on my own.

It has been a very rewarding experience.

I no longer feel that sick, insecure feeling... when I need to have an answer to a challenge because I KNOW that asking questions and going to the BEST PEOPLE is in my best interest.

And that comes from getting results... period.

With no results... there's no competence. Without competence... there's no confidence.

I know that without a doubt, I can find the answer to virtually any challenge that I have by finding the right expert to help me FAR FASTER than if I trying to do my own research, or search the INTERNET on any given topic.

So that's what I've done.

I've found the two men that can absolutely get this part of our lives handled for us. I do the workouts, I follow the nutrition... this Adonis Golden Ratio System that they've created flat out works!

And... not only that... but EMBEDDED in the program, we get one SIMPLE metric to measure your progress against:

Our Adonis Index – The Perfect Body Formula

Talk about simplification - this program solves MOST of the mistakes we've talked about above and puts all of us in the position to manifest attraction from women... and admiration from men... from an entirely different level.

This thing is JAM PACKED with easily navigated pages of workouts, strategies, and pictures that you can download and be applying in literally MINUTES from right now.

Not only that, the brand NEW nutritional software takes all the guesswork about how much you should be eating... this is really cool!

You can test these systems out for yourself and see just how powerful they are for yourself... just watch this very CONTROVERSIAL presentation to see if they are right for you...

Epilogue

I want you to notice that we haven't come close to talking about the health benefits of "the perfect body"...

... or the socio-economics behind your health.

As a quick taste, if you didn't already know, Fortune 500 companies are NOW putting clauses in high level employees' contracts that state that if you die because of your own Self neglect (lack of physicals, exercise, drinking too much, etc)... then your family doesn't get the full death benefit.

THEY UNDERSTAND HOW MUCH MONEY IT COSTS TO REPLACE A HIGH PERFORMER!

Go ahead and put that in the "I'll think about that for a little bit" processing part of your brain...

Understand what this really means.

So, if you haven't read the back story yet... go read the true account of how we figured all this stuff out...
